

Kobe Gakuin University

Kobe Gakuin University was established in 1966 under Shigeki Mori as the first President. It initially offered a single course of study with 100 students, in the Faculty of Nutrition, having the school philosophy of “shinri-aikō kosei-sonchō” (love of truth and respect for individuality). Today, more than half a century later, the university has expanded to become the largest private university in Kobe City to offer programs, combining the humanities with sciences with multiple distinctive campuses, ten faculties and eight graduate schools, and a total of more than 11,000 students. Nearly 90,000 students have graduated from the university or completed graduate school courses, who are taking on an active role in various fields.
